* Welcome to *THE DIFFERENT ISSUE* of Tek Thots (or the modified issue? Non-standard issue?). purpose for this issue is just to get a little info out, and to seek some feedback via a poll. Incidentally, for those of you who love to send me press rel eases about new products and the like: Feel free to send 'em, but I'm not going to print them or anything like that. Might be better to send me an eval copy of whatever it is you wish me to know about. Then, if it strikes me, I'll comment on it....

Also, people occasionally write me, telling me they read about Tek Thots here or there; recently a couple of people in the UK mentioned Computer Shopper. I'd love to get copies of anything like that, so feel free to send 'em to me. Write and ask about a snail mail address. Thanks!

* The 2nd Tek Thots Reader Poll

I get a lot of feedback from readers, most of it very good (thanks!). Since the beginning, most people seemed to have preferred the first and last sections - my miscellaneous thots and privacy/security/infowar thots. I've also gotten various requests for other sections, which I am open to - PROVIDED they are tech-related. Recently, however, people seem to have become more ardent in their comments; I've gotten requests to dump gaming from some, while others write about how they like the gaming section. The same can be said for the financial section, the Mac section, etc. So, another poll.

Please rank each standard Tek Thots section on a scale of 1-10, 1 being LEAST interesting to you, and 10 being MOST interesting to you.

-- News/Editorial
-- PC Thots
-- Mac Thots
-- Web Development Thots
-- This Issue's Plug-in
-- This Issue's ActiveX Control
-- Stock Thots
-- Game Thots
-- Newbie Thot
-- Privacy/Security Thots

Please feel free to provide suggestions, bearing in mind that I have no intention of including non-tech-related sections. This includes Christian devotion sections, porn sections, militia sections, school sections, and other wacky ideas people send to me. These ten sections represent areas of interest to me, and I would have to see fairly strong sentiment to include sections which I'm not interested in at all.

How would you feel about other sections I'm thinking of including (possibly to replace the plug-in and ActiveX sections)"

-- Hardware
-- Programming
-- Unix
-- Information Warfare (by itself)

Occasionally, people have asked me about advertising in Tek Thots (like they do in Tidbits, etc.). I'm not 100% opposed, but I do have ambivalent feelings about the topic. How would you feel if ads appeared in Tek Thots?

* Many of you may remember when I bitched about the French trying to shut down the Georgia Tech (their French location) because it was English-only (at the time) - never mind the fact that the vast majority of individuals involved at the school, whether teaching or students, are English speakers, and the classes are ALL in English. I just hate these types of attempted regulation. Well, it may have been only on a technicality, but a Parisian court threw the case out! This past week, the court dismissed the complaint (alleging that the French campus of a Georgia Tech illegally used only English on the Internet) because the two private French language xenophobic entities which filed the suit failed to notify the state prosecutor's office first. Now, believe it or not, there is a law which requires all ads in France to be in French. The Georgia Tech lawyer said, "It's not a total victory in the sense that we were cleared of all accusations. However, when you win on a question of procedure, you're satisfied, but when you win on the substance, you're happy."

Now, Georgia Tech does have a French version up. As I'm not a lawyer, I have no idea whether this will affect an appeal; I would hope there will be no appeal. Frankly, I'm sick to death of regulatory attempts, even though I'm not naive enough to think things will improve. However, this case simply struck me as absurd as the one in which a California couple was convicted a year or so ago on Memphis porno charges because a Memphis cop dialed into their BBS and downloaded some dirty gifs.... Hey, no one twisted his arm, stuck a gun to his head, and said dial in - he did it of his own free will. Geez, can't people live and let live on these sorts of things?

* Novell is firing off 1000 people (um, that's 18% of their workforce!!!), and taking a $34 million loss (or thereabouts) to try and shore up their operations. NT has basically beaten the hell outta Novell, and they're looking for something to ease the pain....

* I just snagged an eval 56k (flex) modem (Diamond), and I'm looking forward to trying it out. Let you know how it performs.

* I recently came across a pretty cool Win 95/NT utility, which is not like anything I've seen on PC before. VitalSigns (<http://www.vitalsigns.com/>) has put out something called Net.Medic which you can download for a 30 day eval. It's a diagnostic tool for ISPs and end users which provides all sorts of stats and measures things like transmission speeds, etc. It pumps out all sorts of reports (slowest sites, fastest sites, diagnosis for slow-downs, etc, throughput, logs, etc). Some of you might want to check it out....

* All of you Tcl proponents now have a formidable ally. Sun recently announced the formation of SunScript division to promote Tcl as a scripting tool for its Java and JavaBean products. They're going to get a Tcl plug-in out there, and a dev app called SpecTcl. While Sun officials were quick to assert that their support of Tcl doesn't necessarily conflict with their backing of Netscape's pushing of its own JavaScript, you still have to wonder if Netscape's thrilled with this turn of events....

Privacy/Security Thots

writer in the last issue. My assumption was that anyone who gets involved with obvious literary agent scams such as Woodside MUST be wannabees. However, she asserts she's written six books, and I have no desire to diminish her literary efforts. While I do continue to feel there must be some naivete somewhere, I continue to support the efforts to free her of Woodside harrassment. 2) The kind spammers at Woodside are now making death threats to people who ask them to cease the spamming. 3) It's possible one of these Woodside types has been arrested for making these kind of threats, although that hasn't been independently verified yet. 4) John Prader of Paradox.net, a spammer himself, has been harassing and threatening me this week for complaining about one of this customer's spamming habits. 4) I am now working with Dan Farmer! In fact, he gave a lecture to my colleagues and I - something to the effect of how to break into the CIA, if I remember correctly....

* Ironically enough, after all the years of whining on our part to the Feds to ease up on crypto export restrictions, it may be an international effort which succeeds. Sun recently announced it would license and internationally distribute Moscow-based EL VIS+ Co.'s Secure Virtual Private Network software. The 128-bit data encryption and authentication scheme (which is evidently based on Sun's own Simple Key-Management for the Internet Protocol - SKIP) is supposed to be marketed under the name SunScreen S KIP E+. Kicker is, it's got no key recovery system, which might serve to emphasize the idiocy of the medieval US crypto laws. Of course, the Feds' only response was to state that they're "reviewing" the deal.

* So, at the FBI Web site, as is the case with so many Web sites, you'll find a number of press releases. One such recent press release, a statement by FBI Assistant Director James K. Kallstrom, had some interesting things to say regarding the FBI's push for increased telephony espionage rights. Among the comments were:

"Telephone systems are routinely used by the worst and most violent criminals to commit the worst and most violent crimes. Long-standing federal law allows for the tightly controlled use of court-authorized electronic surveillance in the investigation of the most serious violent offenses only when other investigative techniques will not work, when other investigative techniques are too dangerous, and when there is probable cause to believe that telephone communications are being used to carry out serious crimes."

"There should be no civil liberties concerns over these estimates because, as we want to stress again and again, the Act and the steps flowing from it do not give law enforcement any new powers to conduct electronic surveillance." [Maybe that's because law enforcement DOESN'T NEED ANY NEW POWERS to conduct electronic surveillance! I'm willing to be wrong on this factoid, but I am under the impression that a couple of years ago, there were around 800 legally granted wiretaps. If this is indeed the case, could someone possibly begin to explain why the FBI needs so many more electronic avenues to "protect" us???]
